

When blocks are supplied from different batches

If you are looking to expose, or hone your blocks, it is critical that your blocks come from the same batch. Should this not happen, it will be evident once exposed the variation in colours, which can be significant. The topcoat or finishing options will typically not introduce a consistent colour. Tinting options are available to lessen the variation, but this will be more expensive due to additional time it takes to apply, and commonly this will only make the finished result more consistent.
